This scene shows part of the crowd that would attend the Pittman Center Fair. A good picture of the old barn, where livestock was displayed for judging.

This picture shows part of the parade which opened the activities at the Fair. Each wagon was decorated much as floats are in this day and time. The man, on horse back, leading the parade is unidentified.

This scene is taken from the grounds of the Pi Beta Phi School in Gatlinburg. That community had what they called Old Timers Day. The activities were much the same as those held in Pittman Center. Games, contests and lots of things, what a good time was had by everyone attending. There would be competing between the two schools for prizes.
